

Abstract of the Disclosure:

In order to achieve an optimally stable synchronization of clock signals, a temperature-controlled delay device with which it is possible to generate a signal delay that is 5 dependent on an operating temperature is provided in a synchronization device for a semiconductor memory device. In this manner, the clock signal can be time-tuned in a particularly reliable fashion.

REL/nt